1. In exchange for Czech arms and munitions exported to Communist China, Czechoslovakia receives from China certain agricultural products and other commodities, including great quantities of powdered eggs.
2. As a result, Czechoslovakia now has a good deal more powdered eggs than can possibly be used domestically and is trying to dispose of them through tie-in sales with other Soviet Bloc and Western countries. Czechoslovakia is willing to sell large quantities of powdered eggs at a price 60% of the Chinese price.¹
